

CHAOTIC ELECTRIC CAN CAUSE ERRATIC EMOTIONS: THE TERRIBLE TRUTH!

You're definitely not "well" and your doctor can't tell you why. But the worst part is the depression and anxiety that wears away at any quality of life you might have had.

Energy Medicine Foundation is involved with efficacy studies in an area that as yet has had little if any attention, the depression and anxiety brought on by chaotic electric overload. Over the past twelve months, we've become keenly aware of the damage that electric can do to the very delicate covering of the brain. What is being called the Brain's "Auric Shield" (BAS), is to the brain what the aura is to the body—protection from outside forces that can cause damage to the many bodies, not just the physical but the mental, emotional and psychological bodies as well. It has been long accepted that without wellness at all these levels, neither can the physical body be truly "well".

The accumulation of modern day "chaotic" electric seriously interferes with the natural and very subtle, "harmonic" electric of the human system to the extent that the body becomes hyper-sensitized and problematic in many areas. We deal daily with the effects of acid pH caused by chaotic electric overload.

Physical symptoms include a sensitive nervous system, inflamed heart, irritated mucus membranes causing symptoms of respiratory ills, as well as the accumulation of electric in the bone marrow with resultant red blood cell malfunction and forever- fatigue. We call this the syndrome of "exquisite sensitivity".

But there is also a mental component little talked about and not well understood; Energy Medicine Foundation is in the process of researching this very common phenomenon of American society. We see a pattern of depression and anxiety, random thoughts or "mind chatter". The more serious the chaotic electric, the more trouble with simple things like focus and grounding to out-of-character actions. Western medicine's answer is, of course, medications like Paxil, Zoloft or Prozac masking a serious problem, which, until now, has had no real solution.

The electro-sensitive unsettling health issues, which many electro-sensitive clients are able to completely clear, and most importantly, without the use of medications. The answer is simple— clean up the “root cause” (the electric) and the problem solves itself. Energy medicine is, to our knowledge, the only viable answer to chaotic electric overload and the resultant depression and mood swings. And best of all, the results appear to be permanent.

Carol Keppler is the Chief Operating Officer of Energy Medicine Foundation and a Master Energy Intuitive. She is available to speak about her work in the area of electrical overload as a 21st Century health hazard. Contact Carol@energymedicinefoundation.com.